

Jolanta Klimczak – PhD in Social Sciences, her research interests focus on the sociology of gender, particularly on the analysis of gender inequalities in various social contexts such as public space, education, and the labour market. She conducts research on gender stereotypes in the media and the impact of cultural conditions on the perception of gender roles. She is the author of numerous academic publications on gender equality and diversity and a participant in several international research projects.