

Maja Drzazga-Lech – PhD in social sciences, specialising in research on combating social exclusion, with particular emphasis on marginalized groups based on gender and sexual orientation. Her research also includes the analysis of equality policies and their implementation in educational and public institutions. In her publications, she addresses issues related to intersectionality, gender equality in politics, and gender stereotypes in popular Culture. Research interests: socio-cultural identity of the inhabitants of Upper Silesia, sociology of music, including issues related to the reception of musical works and the figures of their creators, audience profile, identity of musical culture institutions, as well as public health and sociology of medicine.